Amazing behind the scenes antics at the meteorological office

MY WEATHER MAP NEARLY FELL OVER

He's the man who appears on our TV screens after the news. The man who points at the map and tells us what the weather is going to be like. He is of course the TV weatherman, one of the under sung stars of the small screen.

But behind the colourful charts and cheery smiles there's a great deal that we, the viewers, never see. As can be revealed by former TV weather forecaster Brian Smith.

SECONDS

"Weather forecasts are usually only a few seconds long", Brian told us. "But often it takes several minutes of gruelling rehearsal to get it right". And things don't always go according to plan.

WOBLED

Like, for instance, the time when Brian’s weather map, probably the most important piece of a weather man’s forecasting equipment, nearly fell over. "It wobbled for a few seconds, but I managed to prevent it from falling", said Brian. Luckily, that happened during a rehearsal. But things can go wrong — and often do — ‘live’ on TV.

DEPRESSION

"On one occasion I was pointing out a depression which was building up just North of the Shetland Islands", Brian told us. “Quite by accident I pointed at the Orkney Islands by mistake. Several viewers rang up and pointed out my error”.

However it’s technical problems rather than human error which the TV weather man most fears, as only too easily things can go wrong. Like the time a cloud fell off Brian’s weather map.

RAINFALL

"I was positioning clouds on an afternoon weather chart to represent likely areas of rainfall, when suddenly, quite out of the blue, one of them fell off. Luckily I managed to remain calm and talk my way through the rest of the forecast without further incident".

ICY ROADS

Of course TV weather men are professionals, trained to handle exactly that kind of situation; And often viewers may not even realise anything has gone wrong.

Brian is lucky in that he never had an accident in his 6 months as a TV weather man. But many others are less fortunate. "One well known weather man who was working for the BBC at the time, managed to trip on a loose wire while making a long range forecast, and a nurse had to look at his ankle".

FOG

TV weather men are often labelled ‘quiet types’, unlike some of their more outlandish colleagues in TV light entertainment. But as Brian tells us, this ‘boring’ image could not be further from the truth.

BOTTOM

"You’d be amazed at some of the goings on behind the scenes at the meteorological office" he revealed. “We’re not as innocent as we appear on the screen”. Brian continues “On one occasion, after we’d been out to the pub for a lunchtime drink, our secretary turned around to find a queue of us waiting to pinch her bottom!”

INTERMITENT SNOW SHOWERS

Finally, says Brian, weather forecasting does have its lighter moments. He recalls how in one incident in 1949 he was a junior forecaster preparing to read a ‘live’ forecast for the West coast of Scotland. "Suddenly, I heard a snap, and when I looked down, my trousers were around my ankles. My braces had snapped!!"

"Luckily I was only doing a radio forecast at the time, otherwise it could have been quite embarrassing!"
Sunday gardener's vegetable surprise

I got the shock of my life one Sunday afternoon whilst digging away on my vegetable patch at the bottom of the garden. My spade struck something solid beneath the soil — a human skull!

I was horrified at first, but the situation was easily explained by the local vicar who informed us that the house was previously owned by a mass murderer.

S. Camboid
Herts

The other day whilst riding my bicycle a reckless driver knocked me flying, fracturing my skull and breaking both my legs in the process. Imagine my surprise when the driver opened his car door and offered me a drink from his half empty whisky bottle before staggering off for help.

It's nice to know that some people are still kind, considerate and helpful, and I am now well on the road to recovery in the intensive care unit at the local infirmary.

Mower Exploded

I got a surprise last week when I plugged in our new lawn mower. It exploded, breaking almost every window in our street.

“Hardly surprising”, explained a fireman after extinguishing our blazing house. “It was a petrol mower.”

After 8 weeks receiving treatment in a local private hospital my father died from a serious heart condition. To my amazement, a week later the hospital sent me a bill.

If a local garage had completely written off my car instead of repairing it I doubt if they'd have been so quick to send me a bill.

Mrs J. Jones

I live with my elderly mother and father, both of whom receive retirement pensions. However, I do not. I have written to my MP about this, but he merely points out that pensionable age in Britain is 65 and I am only 32.

This is all well and good, but I could be stuck be lightning tomorrow and may never reach pensionable age. It seems ridiculous that retirement pensions should be handed out to a minority of people who happen to be old, and not to everybody.

G. Barker
Rotherhyde

I was recently refused unemployment benefit by the Department of Employment on the grounds that I have a full time job. What nonsense.

Do the government seriously expect me to resign my job in order to qualify for benefit?

K. Kennedy
Milton Keynes

I followed electricity cables leading from our meter. To my surprise they ran underneath the garage and into a neighbour's house. Eventually, after much digging, I discovered that every house in our street is connected to the same cable.

No wonder the electricity board make such fat profits when they have every house in the street paying for the same bit of electricity. No doubt the gas board use the same trick.

In the January sales I spotted a motor car reduced from its normal price of £2,995 to £2,495. “Save £500”, said the sales poster.

As I don't drive, I asked the assistant if I could simply take the £500, as I didn't want to buy the car. “No”, I was told.

It just goes to show what a con most of these 'Special Offers' are.

Crazy Leg Mix-up

After a recent road accident I was taken to hospital suffering from minor shock. I was even more shocked when I awoke the next day to find that both my legs had been removed.

There had been a mix up at the hospital, and my legs had been amputated by mistake. Luckily both the doctors and myself saw the funny side, and I have since been awarded damages of over £500,000.

British Rail say ‘we’re getting there’. Well I disagree. During the recent wintry weather I decided to take a train to work, as the roads were blocked by over 2 feet of snow. I took a seat on the platform at my local station and began to wait.

It wasn’t until 4 days later when the snow melted that I realised the station had been closed several years ago and the track removed.

Needless to say there had been no announcements to this effect, and not one member of staff was to be seen.

TV System Not Fair

As a shift worker I only ever find the time to watch TV during the very early hours of the morning. At this time there are never any programmes to watch — usually just a blank screen accompanied by a loud and unpleasant humming noise.

However, I am expected to pay exactly the same amount for a TV license as my next door neighbour who benefits from a full range of daytime programmes.

Surely this system has got to be changed.

H. Parkinson

I try to avoid using trains whenever possible, as the service is invariably poor. On a recent journey from Bristol to London my train eventually arrived, over 7 hours late — in Aberdeen.

Is there a PANSY at the Palace? We ask...

PRINCE OR PUFF?

Is Edward soft or what?

HRH Prince Edward's dramatic resignation from the Royal Marines has left Britain shocked and surprised. And it leaves an enormous question mark hanging over the Prince's head as he continues to ponder his future. It's a question the whole nation is asking. Is Prince Edward soft?

The Royal Family have a long proud history of producing fearless fighting men, courageous soldiers who have lead their country in battle over the centuries. Only recently Prince Andrew in his bullet riddled helicopter pointed the way to victory in the Falklands war, and already young Prince William has been seen 'putting himself about a bit' at his kindergarten school.

The Prince who 'plays with girls'

"What's he gonna do about it?" our reporter asked. There was a short silence, then we were cut off.

CAR PARK

Twenty minutes later we rang again and said that we didn't like Prince Edward's face. Again there was no reply.

Finally our reporter called again and offered to meet the Prince in a nearby car park to settle the matter. We waited in the car park for over an hour. There was no sign of the Prince.

GIRLS

And now, in the wake of our investigations, evidence is coming to light that Prince Edward spent several hours recently, during his leave from the Marines, playing 'girlish' children's games. But it is an undisputed fact that the Prince was more than happy to join in similar games during his early schooldays.

A spokesman for a leading toy shop in London refused to discuss allegations that the Prince regularly visited the store and purchased among other things teddy bears. But as the Prince drove away from the Royal Marine Commando training base at Lympstone in Devon for the last time, a package large enough to contain several childish 'teddy bears' was clearly visible in the back of his car.

STUFF

So has Prince Edward let the family down? His father, the Duke of Edinburgh, is believed to be furious over allegations that his youngest son, 5th heir to the throne, is a pansy. And the fact that at 22 years of age the Prince remains a bachelor, while brothers Charles and Andrew are happily married, has set alarm bells ringing inside the Palace.

SKIPPING

So far there has been no official comment from Buckingham Palace on the suggestion that Prince Edward spent more than a little time during his schooldays 'playing with girls'. Evidence that we found in a park opposite Buckingham Palace suggests that this habit may still exist.

So just what sort of stuff is Prince Edward made out of? We decided to find out for ourselves just how tough he really is. We rang Buckingham Palace and suggested that Prince Edward was a puff.

Billy the Fish

Half man, half fish, Fulchester United's brilliant young keeper Billy Thomson was about to fulfill his life-long ambition... to play for England.

In the changing rooms...

"Strange, there's nobody here!"

But as Billy emerged from the famous players tunnel onto the famous Wembley turf...

Everyone else must have already changed. I'd better get a move on...

Billy wasn't alone...

The man I believed to be England supremo Robby Robinson must have been an evil yet talented impressionist. But why lure me here, to Fulchester Stadium?

Oh no! The stadium has been locked and that hose has been left running! Soon the water level inside the ground will begin to rise... and rise...

And I'll be drowned!!!

Meanwhile, after the shock dismissal of team boss Tommy Brown, Fulchester Chairman Rick Sparkle acts swiftly to appoint a successor.

Fulchester United Football Club has got great potential, I enjoy a challenge, I'll play golf and I've always wanted to be a football manager.

Sure, I've seen that face before.

BILLY WASN'T ALONE...

Hose Pipe Water Valve

THERE'S SOMEONE IN THE STANDS!

Well, Mr. Erm... Smith, you've got the job!

Meanwhile, at Wembley Stadium things are beginning to look grim for Billy...

FULLCHESTER UNITED FOOTBALL CLUB

By the time I've finished my stint as manager, Fulchester United will be bottom of the first division and Grimthorpe City will be unchallenged as they bid for the first division championship!

Hat just as I thought. The stadium is almost empty. Mr. Smith is in fact none other than...

Gus Parker, the evil boss of our arch rival's Grimthorpe City!!

It wasn't long till Parker was in action... on the transfer market.

Hello! Is that fourth division no-hoper's Peddleworth Albion? This is Mr. J. Smith, the new boss at Fulchester United.

I'd like to swap all of our best players for some of your worst ones... and I'll throw in our brilliant keeper Billy Thomson free of charge!

But...

You're trespassing on Fulchester United property! Get out or I'll call the police.

Meanwhile, at Wembley Stadium set to become a watery grave for the young Fulchester number one, and is he really set to join no-hoper's Peddleworth Town on a free transfer? Don't miss issue 23!

LAST TIME CAPTAIN CAPTURED WAS IN DEEP TROUBLE ... IT WAS GETTING DEEPER ALL THE TIME ... YES THE SULPHURIC ACID WAS JUST ABOUT TO DISSOLVE HIM WHEREUPON HIS DISSOLVED BODY WOULD ALMOST CERTAINLY BE CHOPPED TO BITS BY THE WHIRLING BLADES AND THEN, AS LUCK WOULD HAVE IT, THE PIECES WOULD PROBABLY BE STUNG TO DEATH BY KILLER BEES, WHICH WERE HEADING FOR HIM AT THAT VERY MOMENT.

...NOW READ ON...

IF I CAN JUST GET ... THIS ...

SECRET CAPSULE OUT OF MY NOSE

AND GET IT TO BREAK ON THE WHIRLING BLADES - THE CHEMICAL IN IT WILL MIX WITH THE ACID AND CONVERT IT TO...

...HONEY! THIS HAS NEUTRALISED THE ACID, STOPPED THE WHIRLING BLADES ... DISTRRACTED THE BEES ... AND ...

IT ALLOWS ME TO SCALE THE WALLS AND...

SHEEPR: A SEAT I THINK I'LL HAVE A WEET REST

... NOT SO FAST, CAPTAIN... WHAT'S THAT NOISE... THE FLOOR IS SLIDING... WHAT'S THAT... ON NO!

SNAP

IT'S SHARKS! ... BUT IT WILL BE O.K. AS LONG AS THEY DON'T SMELL BLOOD

AT THAT MOMENT, AS IF IN DIRECT CONTRA-DICTION OF HIS HOPES AND PRAYERS ... CAPTAIN CAPTURED GETS A NOSE BLEED

AS THE FLOOR DISAPPEARS THINGS LOOK BAD BUT JUST THEN THE CAPTAIN Notices, HIGH UP ON THE WALL ... A KEY ... IF HE CAN ONLY REACH IT IN TIME HE CAN UNLOCK HIS BONDS AND STOP HIS NOSE BLEED ... BUT CAN HE? ... AND WILL IT? ...... STAND BY FOR MORE ... INCARCERATED CAPERS NEXT TIME!

EVERYBODY KNOWS A RUDE WORD OR TWO. THE ONLY TROUBLE IS YOU'RE NOT ALLOWED TO USE THEM. EVEN ON TV, RUDE WORDS AREN'T ALLOWED UNTIL AFTER 9.00 P.M.

BUT DON'T WORRY. IF YOU'VE BEEN ITCHING TO USE A RUDE WORD LATELY, THEN NOW'S YOUR CHANCE. BECAUSE WE'RE HAVING A UNIQUE RUDE WORD COMPETITION AND WE WANT YOU TO TELL US THE RUDEST WORD YOU KNOW.

There's only one band going anywhere in this issue's Top Ten and that's FLESH FOR LULU. They came in with a bulging sackful of gifts, and it sends their single, 'Idol' flying in at number one with a massive total of £39.37, making A CERTAIN RATIO's effort of £8.99 look very humble indeed. Blackpool's DEF-A-KATORS are the only outfit to muster a fiver in what is otherwise a dull chart.

Probably the most unusual entry is by THE GODFATHERS who left four cans of beer on our doorstep. A total value of only £1.26, but we decided to give them third place anyway.

Win Six Great Discs!

To celebrate FLESH FOR LULU's first ever number one outing we're giving away a pile of records which they sent us. All you have to do is answer the following questions:

1. Flesh For Lulu is an unusual name for a group, but can you name the scottish singer whose unusual four letter name appears in their name?
2. What is the capital of Scotland?

Then, as a tie breaker, tell us in not more than a dozen words how much money you'll give to us for the records. There are six albums to be won, by Peter Murphy, The Fall, Gene Loves Jezebel, The Bolshoi, Icicle Works and The Go-Betweens. So send your answers, on postcards only please, to the VJ Top Ten address as soon as possible.

Meanwhile, if you have a record which you'd like to appear in the Viz Top Ten, and you've got the cash to prove it, send it to us at: Viz Top Ten, Viz Comic, 16 Lily Crescent, Newcastle upon Tyne NE2 2SP. But remember, gifts will only be valued at 75% of their estimated retail cost.

Next Big Thing

Readers of Viz Comic number 2 may recall the name Low Profile. They were the dynamic young pop group lead by Dave Maughan who we tipped for big things.

Alas, Low Profile eventually fizzled out. And similarly, all Dave's subsequent projects, among them The Dancing Spoons, have come to nothing. Now Dave's latest venture, Lies, all lies! look set to go the same way.

Their single, 'Still Night Air', has been in the shops for almost a year now, selling only 48 copies.

"The problem is, we're not very good", Dave told us recently. "But I'm still determined to make it as the next big thing in the pop business".

Crap

However the road to the top is tough, especially when you're crap. But plucky Dave hasn't given up hope. Indeed Lies, all lies! are set to appear on The... Tube TV pop show this month. "With a bit of luck we will be the latest big thing by this time next year", cheps Dave.

Meanwhile, his record is still available in the shops.

Win a modern new 'CD' record

Manchester band A CERTAIN RATIO who came second in this issue's Top Ten sent us their compact disc version of their current LP 'Force'. Unfortunately we haven't got a compact disc type record player, so we're having to give it away.

To win this fabulous compact disc simply answer the following Manchester oriented questions on a postcard, and send your entries to us at the Top Ten address.
